NOTES.

The teacher / project leader will now have to take the children's work away and stitch it all together into a full and workable script.

Script writing is a particular skill and not something the children will have a lot of experience in. They will tend to write in a more prosaic style and, depending on the level of ability among the children, there will be more or less actual script to work with.

However, there will be a detailed storyline, and story board, so the teacher / project leader should have enough to create a script of 10 – 15 pages, containing 7 – 10 scenes.

See SCRIPTING WORKSHEET for some help with scripting the drama.
